

ound school

Haycock, explained why the bodies are so densely packed. He said: "We dig out, and if we can get 12 foot we do, then we pile them one upon the other perhaps 6 or 8 or 9 [bodies] in it ... just as if you were piling up bricks."

He added that the smell was "dreadful, and all smells".

Principal of Globe Academy, Matt [Name], said: "This is a really fascinating site and reaches us a great deal about the past."

MP asks for Heygate papers

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE: The row over levels of social housing on the Heygate redevelopment continued this week as Simon Hughes demanded to see financial documents relating to the £1.5 billion deal.

In a meeting with the developer Lend Lease, the Bermondsey and Old Southwark MP said the company told him it had "nothing to hide" if Southwark Council agreed to details being released.

Mr Hughes has been locked in a war of words with the Labour administration since he called for Phase One of the regeneration to be "thrown out and redrawn" with more social housing.

However, Southwark Council said the information was commercially sensitive and could not be released for fear of jeopardising the deal.

Council leader Peter John retaliated by slaming the Lib Dem MP as a hypocrite, saying only a week after calling for a planning application to be withdrawn, he voted in parliament to let developers try to "wriggle out" of providing new affordable housing on new developments. "This new power will allow developers to build fewer affordable homes even where the local authority has deemed this is to be inappropriate," he argued.

Mr Hughes confirmed he had voted